Study Made of Tax Rates and Assessments in Old Dominion

Richmond, Nov. 22.—The true value of all real estate in Virginia is $2,665,756,000 according to figures prepared for the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce by John H. Russell, director of research of the Virginia Department of Taxation.

Assessed value of real estate in Virginia counties is $1,212,085,000, but Dr. Russell points out that assessments are only 45.3 per cent of the actual value of land, as a state average. Similarly, Virginia cities assess only 78.7 per cent of total value. Real estate assessments of Virginia cities total $282,066,000. Dr. Russell states that the true value of locally assessed real estate in the counties is $1,212,085,000 and in the cities $282,066,000.

Added to this must be real estate owned by railroads and other public service corporations, assessed by the State Corporation Commission as totaling $282,066,000. In the counties and $44,994,000 in the cities. Dr. Russell's figures show the true value of these holdings to be $336,240,000 for the counties and $44,994,000 for the cities. Added to these figures of values are $499,244,000 of properties representing non-taxable real estate in Virginia.

Assessment county has a taxable real estate value greater than any other county and tax rate of the individual cities except three. Its value of $1,012,234 is greater than the combined value of real estate in sixteen other counties in Virginia and exceeds by more than six million, the total values of ten Virginia cities. The only cities having a greater value are Richmond, Roanoke and Norfolk.

Roanoke, a total real estate value of $2,171,542, is the lowest in value of any county. Norfolk, with $2,705,700, is second in value in the state, Fairfax

Game Population Changes After Forest Fires
Forest fires can kill men and animals long ago and last year's smoldering fires in the Shenandoah National Park have begun to hide the wide black scars of the forest.

In past years, great forest fires devastated large areas in northern Ontario. When new growth came, the forest was a different one. The new vegetation, in its turn, was a different one. The new vegetation, in its turn, was a different one.

Elizabeth Browning's Sonnet
Elizabeth Barrett Browning's best work, "Sonnets From the Portuguese," written after Browning had won her affection, is a series of lyrics, strong, tender, unaffected, true, from the depth of a woman's heart. Synthesistic readers know the story of her early life and love, the story of her early life and love, the story of her early life and love.

Preserve School
In 1927 the schoolhouse immortalized in the poem "Mary Had a Little Lamb" was moved from Redstone Hill in Sterling, Mass., to Henry Ford's Wayside Inn estate in South Hadley, Mass. The schoolhouse is in use with 16 pupils of the first four grades in attendance during the school year. The pupils who attend this little one-room school are residents of the town of Sudbury.

Report Recommendations For Virginia Game Commission

By Robert C. Harper
Richmond, Nov. 22.—General H. L. O'Neil's recommendations for a reorganization of the State Game and Inland Fish Commission, and the editorial comments evoked, thereby, constituted the state government's chief news story last week.

Following publication of General O'Neil's report, Delegate Malburn Bustard, Danville, chairman of the commission studying wild life conditions, stated that "General O'Neil has incorporated in his report many recommendations which the public will find in the report of the commission which I am chairman, when it is released."

Mr. Bustard added that "I regret General O'Neil's report is necessary to give a report which he terms a 'minority view' before completion of the commission's report, but without affecting the membership of the commission an opportunity to express themselves with reference to the problem confronting the enforcement division of the state game commission."
